In Somosaguas Norte, one of Madrid's most exclusive and green residential enclaves, sits this detached home with over 1,000 m² of built area, of which more than 500 m² are on the main floor, designed by architect Pedro Casariego. The house sits on a 4,495 m² plot with an established, lush garden, swimming pool, and porches oriented to enjoy the outdoors year-round. It is the kind of property that rarely comes on the market: a solid foundation and a privileged setting, with ample room to make it entirely your own. The residence is accessed through a spacious entrance hall with a coat closet and a guest powder room. The living room and dining room are independent of each other, and both have direct access to the garden. Similarly, the large independent kitchen has outdoor access and connects to the service quarters, allowing the day-to-day operations of the house to function without intruding on the more social living areas. The rest area is likewise laid out on this same floor, with the master bedroom in the living room wing featuring a walk-in closet, home office, and en-suite bathroom, alongside four additional bedrooms with three bathrooms—all without relying on stairs. Below ground level, a generously sized basement adds extra rooms, highlighted by a large multipurpose room of over 150 m², a bathroom, and a garage. It also features additional covered...
